Peace –

Conditionally Within Reach

THIS MONTH'S PANEL:

SHO ... 2

MASTER KUTHUMI ... 6

KEN'U ... 8

LORD MAITREYA ... 11

Sho ...

I would like to speak to the energy of peace. Peace is an energy and it might not be what you are expecting.

In my opinion, peace is respect manifested. It is a simple definition, but that is what I view peace to be. It is an energetic condition. So peace is an energetic condition in which respect is manifested.

Now, I would like to make it clear that I do not consider tolerance to be respect. Respect has its own energy signature that includes acceptance, understanding, appreciation. Now, that can be a great deal to ask, especially if there is historic enmity between two people. But you see, the respect as I defined it is not for the personality but basically for the spark of the soul-vortex that lives within the heart chakra of every incarnate human being.

This is respect for the soul and this respect is based upon the fact, not the premise but the fact that there is an energetic web that ties together the heart chakras of every single incarnate human being. And when respect is in place, the love and compassion and brotherhood of the soul-vortex on its own plane flows down through the outpost of that soul that exists within the heart chakra and flows out into the network that connects the heart chakras of all incarnate human beings.

Those who are sensitive can feel the energy flow coming through them and out the heart chakra into that network.

I am speaking now of your respect for someone flowing into that network. This does not mean that you enjoy this person, that you agree with them or that you approve of all their behaviors. But it does mean that you acknowledge your connection with them and the fact that you have and live in the same energetic network.

Peace starts when you look in the mirror and you have respect for the image facing you, that you have respect for yourself, respect for the soul-vortex that lives as an outpost in your heart chakra, and the soul-vortex that exists on its own plane in the inner worlds. This soul came into this life with a mission; this soul has a responsibility. Respect your accomplishments, respect your skill set and respect the capability you have of sending love into that network. And if you cannot manage love because the definition is difficult for you, then let goodwill flow through your soul-vortex outpost and from there out the heart chakra and into the world.

This activity creates the foundation for peace. I think you can understand that I am not counting as peace the absence of bombs, the absence of guns, the absence of violence. Peace is more than that; it is more demanding because you must acknowledge the Oneness of the human family if you are to have peace.

This is not easy to live with. This is not easy. I'm not pretending it is. Because if you indeed are living that respect, you are dealing with those you do not agree with and a whole list of people you would rather not be connected with ... but you are. The challenge is to learn how to respect those who would not go on your list of people that you are willing to respect.

It is time to pay attention to your list of those you are not willing to respect because I can promise you that energetically your heart chakra is connected to theirs.

Now how does this respect implement? Having the energy flow through you is not enough. This respect must be manifested concretely. And how do you do that? Well, that is a very good question. It begins with sharing, sharing the resources of the planet. The human family is overflowing with haves and have-nots, those countries, groups and individuals who have wealth, those who have not; those who have access to potable water, those who do not; those who have adequate clothing, housing and food, those who do not; those who have opportunities for spiritual and/or secular education, those who do not. Look in the mirror, look at your family, your community, your country. Where does sharing begin ... and how quickly does it end?

Respect must be manifested, and to be manifested, there is inevitably some decision-making going on and that decision-making results in a plan of some sort. Peace, then, is a conglomeration, an energetic unity. This unity includes not only manifested respect, but also an impetus from the soul that enables the soul's very essence of inclusion, of Oneness, to flow through your heart and through your mind where planning takes place. What are those plans? How can that multi-dimensional peace conglomeration be implemented?

That is a question for you to answer. How do you implement respect for a co-worker you really don't want to work with? There are other very difficult situations. How do you implement respect for a religious sect, the religious philosophy you most disagree with? How do you manage that respect? Because until you do, there will be contention and there will be no peace.

When you vilify a particular group or person, be they an ethnic group, a religious group, a co-worker, a neighbor, there will be no peace.

Now, this does not mean in any way that you tolerate harmfulness, cruelty, violence, and in violence I incorporate such things as theft and gossiping. It need not be physical violence. It can be psychological violence and it can be many other kinds of acts. Respect does not mean that you tolerate destructive behavior and let it go. But until such time that you, as a human family, acknowledge the fact that you are all connected via the heart chakra to every other human being, there will be no peace.

When you, as a family realize that your challenge is to manifest respect and let the energy of Oneness that exists in all of those soul-vortices on their own plane, let that powerful energy flow freely through you into the network and manifest respect in the most difficult situations simply because you are one human family, when you can do that, then there will be peace. You will be on the road to peace because you will be creating an energetic environment that is conducive to peace.

This is not easy. I will have two things to say to you. One, the human family of Earth is intensely and endlessly creative. You can find and create and manifest a way. I have no doubt about that. But the second reason is that the Community of Masters and Off-Earth Allies like myself are here to help you do exactly that, to help you through the most difficult, challenging ways of manifesting respect because when you start manifesting that respect, you are acknowledging and manifesting the steps to Oneness. And when you have Oneness or are even on your way to Oneness and determined to get there, you will begin to have peace.

I did not say it was easy. It is not. But I would refer you to an article I submitted to these panel discussions in June of 2014 on how you can adapt and adjust to a piece of information that upsets your worldview and threatens the pillars of your worldview. If what I am saying does exactly that, threaten the pillars of your worldview, I would ask you to consider that article because what I am telling you is energetic truth. It is energetic reality. Until such time as respect is manifested – deliberately, actively manifested – there will be no peace.

As this year comes to an end, and a new year opens, I would invite you to begin by looking in the mirror and asking yourself how you can implement respect for the individual facing you. And then expand your circle. How can you implement respect for the connection you have with those you live with? With your neighbors? With those in the same city? With those you meet when you leave your home?

Ask yourself how you can demonstrate and manifest respect based on the fact that there is between you and every other individual an energetic connection at the heart chakra that cannot possibly be destroyed. And if you are not sending love and goodwill into that energy network, there is no hope of peace.

Thank you.

Master Kuthumi ...

Instilled in the hearts of humanity is a fighting nature of colossal degree. It has permitted humanity to foster itself through adversity after adversity throughout the history of existence. This great wilful and integral quality is like a great spark that human beings cannot extinguish. It fuels the survival of the races epoch after epoch, so deeply entrenched is its parameter.

You call it the survival instinct. It kicks in at any time your existence is threatened or you need an extra boost to get by. This survival instinct is a hardy standby saving point inherent to individuals, to groups, to entire races. While it is essential to the continuance of the species, it is also, to its detriment, a strong, engaging quality that is indeed fostering humanity's extinction.

This need to strive to survive has pitted humanity against itself and those who should behave in brotherhood are engaged in un-peaceful measures against each other. It is a paradox of immense measure. The very quality that keeps one alive is the same quality used as a platform to harm and destroy others.

So what to do about it? How does one resolve this paradox with some resolute success? Literally, we need to unplug from this instinct at times, to have discretion about when to use it and when to relax it. That will be the hard part, using one's discretion because it comes from experience and practice, observation and assessment.

This statement may seem a new discovery to you, but upon reflection you will find that indeed the very source of the urge to exist can and will benefit yourself while at the same time obstruct others equally. The level of cooperation required to have peaceful times has been accomplished through an unspoken understanding that decisions that benefit the all rather than the one are necessary to achieve this ideal.

More decisions based on consideration of the whole and fewer ego-based decisions is the simple path to peace. Even in the case of the survival instinct, thinking about how all can survive rather than just how you or your particular group can survive will alter the outcome of this highly directing instinct. For some, it will be a minor mental adjustment to the way they think ... to remember to consider the bigger picture, to understand both sides of the story rather than value only their own position. "This is what I want, what I need" becomes, "This is what we want, what we need." Humanity is a family. There is a responsibility to provide for the whole family. There is a responsibility to aid the survival of the whole family in a way that provides for each and every soul. This is peace. And every soul yearns for peace somewhere in their life. But it will not come to humanity until the thought process includes considerations to all of humanity.

Old hatreds lie at the base of many failed peace talks and measures. Old hates fuelled by new hatreds that seem to have no end in sight. These moments of darkness are leading humanity to the brink. Mindful care on how to address these old wounds is the tipping point to a collective consideration. Humanity must find the strength inside themselves to not inflame these old hatreds but yet address the problems from a wider view with considerations to each party.

We who are Earth Advisors will never give up on reaching this compromise, I promise you. We are ourselves mindful of how difficult it is for human beings to redirect their instincts of survival to instincts of brotherhood. But without a peaceful resolution to conflicts worldwide, the human family will suffer even wider grief and discord, for the lack of peace has provided a shroud of darkness that will descend collectively. Earth Advisors can no longer hold it back. Now, only humanity and the decisions they make will dissolve this descending shroud. We will help you, but you must do the work to repair the long hatreds and proceed to peace.

Kuthumi

Ken'u ...

There is little time for humanity to continue walking the path you currently travel, perpetuating a less than peaceful existence with yourselves and with the planet you share with so many other species. The dialogue you need to be having now, this very moment in history, is one of peaceful cohabitation not only with every other species but with each other. And this dialog must reflect a steady and healthy respect for the process of evolution. This may sound heady indeed but it is simple in its concept. Yet such a dialog will remain very difficult so long as there remains a lack of understanding about the importance of its aim.

The planet cannot sustain a lack of peace for much longer. Heavy energy that has accumulated over centuries of less than peaceful thoughts and activities continues to be shoveled out in a steady stream of negativity and destruction. We who are Earth Advisors have worked hard to shield current generations of the human family from the angers of the past. Yet despite our efforts, these destructive energies have gotten around our protocols and have spread into other realms of Earth ... and beyond.

These heavy, escaping energies are affecting the environments of both your Earthly and your off-Earth neighbors in a way that is indeed highly harmful. What can your neighbors do to prevent this? They must protect themselves and we can no longer deflect this destructive energy from its harmful course. We have exerted much effort to prevent what will eventually occur. As one family, you must choose. You can continue carrying on this way, causing harm to other environments and inhabitants or you can buckle down and reach out with peaceful posturing and shift the underlying energies toward collaboration and Oneness in order to counter the current flow of negativity.

Without knowledge of the laws that govern all existence, we find humanity lacking the motivation to strive for better and more peaceful solutions. War still breeds more war and kills the best of peace plans laid. An unseemly result will occur.

Now, it is the threat of institutional collapse that will refresh the climate humanity breathes and refuel unifying ideals and solutions. The boundaries of your suffering have been met. Humanity should by now be ready to forgo war for societies based on equalizing peace. Yet, we who are Earth Advisors do not see this happening and time has expired. So with encouragement and hope, we ask the human family of Earth to maintain a steady hand and extend this hand to your off-Earth neighbors and colleagues while you walk a path reuniting your family, leaving behind distrust and opposition.

Events in abundance demonstrate that the time is nigh to embrace a truly peaceful process to living and being. Anything less will result in that which we fear will unravel humanity to the core. Much rests on a turning point you cannot see, but we can see and hear and feel the seriousness of this point in time. Gather your courage and put down adversarial, self-serving protocols. Join forces in conquering the need to wage endless war against your fellow citizens. This is one planet after all and one planet of extreme diversity. Peaceful living, peaceful attitudes and peaceful thoughts are not a wild promise of the future. They are your answer right now to ending chaos and confusion. It is your answer to building a future ... or to destroying the chance of having one.

Ending chaos should be a simple choice. Simple to choose but harder to actualize, we know. Yet so far efforts to win peace have amounted to reams of paper and chats and not enough accountable action to launch this discourse into energetic reality. Always the foibles of being human derail the best made plans to develop the art of peaceful co-existence. War lies beneath the surface of many skins, but it is a losing battle.

By now, you should know you are indeed losing the battle with your environment due to the results of war-like actions and thoughts. You are emitting heavy, destructive energy and shrouding the best of your co-existence thoughts with destruction's vibrant allure. The cost of this dance is deadly ... quite literally.

Build peace in individual hearts and minds first. Then build peace in your work places, your communities and countries. Demand and express its importance in your daily lives. Start the dialogue, the flow and opportunities for peaceful resolve and actions to be the answer to everything and anything. It is you, individually and in groups, who must lead by example and you who will strike the pathway for others to follow, to be inspired to develop new strategies and trustful relationships.

The path is a long, arduous path, full of life and death, but for every member of the human family, it is your path and you alone can live it. Meet the people around you. Listen and hear them. Recognize that you all have the same needs and thus focus on those needs to be fulfilled for all. If you each strive to maintain a peaceful relationship with everyone around you, you will ensure that the millennium of hateful creeds does not continue to pollute the stratosphere with negative energies that then weigh down the hearts of the entire human family. An everyday practice of loving, peaceful thoughts, actions, duties will build an energy of balance and calm.

This is not a religious ideal, nor a political ideal ... it is a lifestyle ideal that benefits a healthy, balanced environment for you and all your neighbors. It is a condition of attainable peace.

Lord Maitreya ...

My message this month will be brief. There are simply some facts that need to be laid before the human family of Earth. The good news is that peace is indeed possible. Now, we are using our definition of peace.

Our definition of peace centers on the concept that God loves every human soul and every human soul is on a journey of return to Source, the Divine, or for many people, God or Allah.

Perhaps peace means to you that there is an absence of war, an absence of objectionable headlines or newscasts – the ones that make you squirm or feel uncomfortable about what is going on some place in the world, be that the city a few kilometers away or a country a quarter of the way around the world. If peace to you means that your life goes on undisturbed, then perhaps peace is not possible.

If peace to the governments of nations means that the ones in charge have the final say and no one's giving them any hassle about the way they run things, then there will be no peace.

If on the other hand, peace means that finally the bulk of humanity can reach the point where there is an internal understanding that you are all one family, an understanding that what happens to any one of you that is uncomfortable to hear about or read about is happening to your family member, then you are ready for the concept of Oneness.

So the conditions for peace that are attainable begin with an understanding that the human family will not ever be divided – not ever. This cannot be done. And when you realize that, that it is simply not acceptable to say that this part of the human family will have the advantages of whatever topic you care to name, the advantages of education, the advantages of wealth, the advantages of power over others, finer clothes, better food – so long as you have that expectation, there will not be peace.

It is not enough to say you contribute to this organization or that organization and expect peace. It is not enough that you build up the military and your military arsenal and expect that that will bring peace. It will not. Peace is attainable only when you realize that you are one human family, only one. And it is not possible to denigrate, harm, ignore members of this family and say that you have peace.

We have said that peace is conditionally obtainable. Well, the condition is that you recognize the Oneness of the human family, you recognize that you are all connected to the same energetic network, you are all fed by and feed the same energetic network.

Incorporating that concept into your worldview is an extraordinarily difficult task. We know that. That is why so many Off-Earth Allies have come at this time to this planet, because they have practical experience helping the humanity of countless other planets accomplish the same realization so they can build the same realization into their worldview.

We are all here to assist as you wrestle with this most awkward and difficult and unwelcome piece of reality. Because once you accept that this is the condition of peace, there is not one single human life that will remain unchanged. Accepting this truth and acting upon it, truly acting upon it in your daily life, will change you and everyone else. This is not easy. But this change is the change that the human family must make. If you truly want peace, anything else is just a pause between confrontations and violence.

When I say violence, I mean violence that is affront by neglect, by direct harm, by gossiping, by criticism, by anger, by withholding the Earth's products and resources that should be shared. All of this is violence against family members. Unless you understand and act on the fact that you are one family and each family member is valued in the eyes of the Source, of the Creator, when you realize this and act upon this and begin to use respect and diplomacy and sharing, you are on your road to peace.

I hope I have made it clear this does not mean you tolerate the fact that one family member is inflicting some kind of violence upon another family member. This is not acceptable. But you do not resolve this by perpetuating the violence. You solve this in ways that we can help you see, and you solve this by taking what we can offer you in guidance and applying your own creativity and determination to find a way forward that does not involve denigrating the other.

My blessings upon you all as this year ends. May the new year bring you new insight into what it really takes to achieve peace.

Thank you.

Lord Maitreya*
