WORLD RENAISSANCE A New Civilization In The Making

Many believe that humanity today needs a new plan that fits with our rapidly changing world. We are in a rebirth of human consciousness which is most evident in the technological achievements of the past fifty years. Humanity has been forced to see the world differently and we are weary of the old divisions created by political, economic, business and religious leaders. What is needed are new institutions that can support cooperative ways to share this world in peace and with dignity for all. For the first time in the history of planet Earth, we have the opportunity to make available to all the ability to live free from want, free from fear, free to speak openly and free to worship as we please.

These four freedoms were introduced by President Franklin Roosevelt toward the close of World War II when he believed it was the ideal time to introduce them as the basis for rebuilding the world. Although the implementation of these freedoms was delayed by the Cold War and other concerns, we can at this time move forward rapidly if we choose. There is evidence everywhere that the people will now insist upon these freedoms. Since 1977, we have seen many miracles that offer new freedoms to many people. The Soviet Union voted itself out of existence, Germany was re-united and Nelson Mandela became the new leader in South Africa. All this happened without a huge and bloody war. It was indeed a miracle. China opened its doors to the world and its people began to flourish. Change continues at an ever more rapid pace. We now see people venting their anger at government with the riots in the streets of Europe and the Middle East. We see demonstrators in New York City focused on Wall St. and the harm big banks have created through their greed and arrogance.

People know that all these old systems have failed, having given us only chaos, war, brutality against fellow humans and in general, making life a living hell. Now we are aware of the new World Renaissance visibly unfolding around us which brings much hope for change. Many are ready to close the door on the past and leap boldly into a new future that must be totally restructured on new principles. As J. Krishnamurti said, "It is no measure of health to be well adjusted to a profoundly sick society."

We have seen attempts by governments, business, religions and others to create systems to bring success and they have all failed. Communism, Nazi socialism, capitalism, and the new socialism of the European Union have all been tried and have all failed or are failing. Global free trade is not fair trade. International trade agreements are non-democratic, just as the attempts to create a central government for the European Union is non-democratic. All of these old systems and current attempts to solve problems are essentially based on greed, competition, arrogance and, at times, just plain nonsense. So, what is needed? What are the key issues that must be dealt with first? In other words, what is the new plan?

To begin with, imagine yourself in Northern Italy five hundred years ago when the Renaissance began. That society was reborn because a new consciousness or awareness was coming to life as it is again today. People felt that they had the right to choose new ways to express themselves. It was an enlightening era for people in that area and that light spread slowly across Europe. New ideas and a new sense of freedom to express those ideas changed the world. As the French philosopher Voltaire said, "Once people begin to reason, all is lost." Yes indeed, our dysfunctional past now needs to be lost again. The people have begun to reason that it is time to toss out all the past since it has produced only failure and suffering.

We all know that change does not come easy to human beings. To quote Voltaire again, "It is hard to free fools from the chains they revere." Today, we can see on the horizon a very dark cloud. It is about to bring humanity much pain and suffering because our old institutions are about to fail. As some top economists have said, there is no doubt that our international economic system will crash; it is only a question of when. If there is not a plan to implement new institutions that are built on cooperation, not competition, then the transition into a new consciousness with a compatible social system will be slow and very painful. Many will not survive the shift.

Any plan must include instituting new freedoms and expanding current freedoms. No country in the world at this time can be held up as a champion of providing human freedom. Humanity, however, does understand that we can now do magical things. We can dream bigger than before because we have seen the new technological magic that brings us more freedoms. People today are mentally prepared for greater developments in the technological field of discovery. At the same time, we have leaders who are aware that they too need training to be better leaders of this Renaissance. There are those who have already developed courses to train current leaders to understand this new age. Much is happening that goes unseen by the public. There is truly a host of intelligent and wise people who understand this Renaissance and they are ready to step forward when humanity calls upon them.

This new plan has been in the embryo state for twenty five years and has grown into maturity more recently. There are groups with the wisdom to work in harmony with this new Renaissance that is about cooperation and group activity. Gone will be the days of the guru, the hero, the singular leader. Gone will be the old ways of doing business. Gone will be the powerful individuals who demand our allegiance. The new group of world servers will be humble but very effective. They will not produce dogmas or rules but rather offer a vision of how to cooperate without developing the polarized positions that only divide humanity. It must be leadership by example, not rules that must be obeyed. There can be no divisions among humanity in this new plan. Although many will want to claim special rights, it will not be tolerated. Any division between humans will not be in the interest of humanity and not part of the united plan.

Watch for those indications that signal a Renaissance movement. Once such a movement has begun, it cannot be stopped. It can only be slowed but that would create terrible pain and psychological trauma. Watch for the crash of the old institutions and know it is for the best. There will be no need for revolution because the old dysfunctional patterns that have blocked human evolution will be ignored into becoming museums of past mistakes. Only the new that serves societies according to the plan will flourish. Greed will disappear because people will become confident that they will have all they need to be fully functional humans enjoying a productive life. There will be no need to hoard or squander more than you need. It will be a truly new world with a totally new consciousness.

People will quickly forget about the old cruel and dysfunctional past civilizations. Thus, we will all become builders of a new civilization that will have new qualities that humans in the past have never known. Some call this bridging Heaven and Earth. We have the freedom to accept this offer and move quickly into a new world reality or we can resist the change and suffer the pain of chaos. This rebirth of humanity will come easily or painfully depending upon the choice of humanity.

The new civilization is ours to design, ours to build and ours to implement. The current World Renaissance is but our transitional pathway to that civilization.

It is the belief of those who bring you this message that we do not travel this path without guidance from our elder brothers and sisters who are further down the road of spiritual maturation. If you reject the concept of elder brothers and sisters, that is perfectly acceptable. If, however, you wish to glean in-depth information on the new civilization and the assistance our elder brothers and sisters offer, we invite you to visit our websites, WeSeekToServe.com and ThoughtsFromAMaster.com and browse the many discussions offered there.
