(from the Constellation Aquila)

The process of building a new civilization on Earth is a very sticky one, for indeed, the people of humanity are quite particular about changes to their current civilization and pride themselves on what is now happening, rightly or wrongly. Pride will keep you in the dregs. Alas, we who are Earth Advisors know this is not conducive to a healthy, expansive existence.

Thus, we will push to expand your consciousness, expand your awareness of all that there is to learn about your planet, about each other and about the cosmos. This will lead to spiritual growth and a new civilization. We will push humanity with the information we have to deliver, for information will call into question that about which you are so content and proud. Information will force – or at least strongly encourage – a vast expansion of consciousness.

The fall humanity will experience is the fall of your pride in the current situation. The fall is the crumbling of current values that place so much emphasis on wealth and war. War is not a way of life. War is a deviation from any plan on any planet in the universe. This is what will fall: the misconceptions, the conceptions that are contrary to the Plan for this planet. This fall will not be so difficult to realize as it is already in full swing, becoming more and more prevalent and easy to see.

Can you not see it for yourselves? See how damning the conditions are for many of those who are not falsely inflated with a status of luxury or comfort? So many are suffering, so many are eking out their existence ... and this right next to, side by side with those who are basking in comfort.

How can this contrast be a balanced way for your future? Yet, since early human life, this has been a standard modus operandi for every culture on Earth, except some native cultures that provide for the whole village per se. They do not let one person suffer. They provide sustenance and shelter for all who are in their tribe and take the responsibility to provide aid when aid is needed. No one should feel afraid to live, yet for some of humanity today, this fear is normal, everyday existence.

This way of living has reached its zenith and chaos ensues the planet over. Humanity of this planet has not profited by movements of brotherhood to a level you should have come to by now. Today you are lagging behind, dragging your heels and continually behaving with a profit-based modus operandi over a compassionate one. People see some areas where they extend a hand to help the suffering, but on the whole, the suffering is plastered over large areas, untouched by aid and compassionate brotherhood.

So this civilization will change and be re-invented. Rebirth. We Earth Advisors are uniting our efforts to guide you toward a rebirth of unsurpassed expression. We shall work tirelessly to guide world leaders towards building an unsurpassed existence in such a way that every person is counted as being important to your human family.

Every person is a soul in expression and needs to be in a position to convey that truth. Healthier relationships will lead to healthier ways of living. Healthier hearts will lead to a healthier expansion of opportunities, a healthier expansion of consciousness.

For humanity, this day you are living now shall have its reckoning, but also its reward. You are on the brink of the greatest expansion of livingness to date. You must move forward to what awaits ... for how can you continue as you are?

Master Kuthumi ...

Humanity is in a very tenuous position. The challenge before the human family of Earth is significant. You are, in essence, traveling through a very busy construction zone.

Think of the disruption that you meet when you pass through a major construction area, whether it is a construction zone redoing the infrastructure for the roadways or the sewer and water or whether this is a reconstruction that is rearranging the places that you are quite accustomed to shopping in for your food. Let us say you are accustomed to going to a farmers' market or an open air market to get certain products and you are very comfortable because you have been there many times and you know where things are. And this could be your grocery store. This could be a dirt path to the well where you get water.

Whatever it is, you are quite accustomed to following a certain path, getting what you need, visiting with those you might meet and returning with what it is you came for. This is your daily life. This system is what you are so accustomed to using that you don't really think about how it is organized. You simply know where things are and how to get what it is you need. And that is what will change.

For you see, the entire human family of Earth is walking through a construction zone. And in this construction zone that which no longer serves is being weeded out and must be weeded out so that that which is new and serves a new purpose, today's purpose not yesterday's purpose, can be built. The foundation is being laid.

And when you want to follow your ordinary path, your established habits to go out and quickly accomplish your chore, get what you need and return to other things that are on your mind, you will find that everything has been rearranged. So you have to take time to figure out how to get from where you are to where you want to be. And once you even get there, things aren't the way they were and things that you counted on – products that you counted on, foodstuffs that you counted on and are accustomed to using – are no longer available.

This is the zone that you are working through as the human family of Earth.

Let me focus now on the fall and what is going away. What is being weeded out are those structures that no longer serve the whole, be they local structures, regional rules or culture-specific ways of thinking that are outmoded and belong to an old, dying age. They are familiar ... but they do not serve the concept of Oneness for the entire human family. Rather they serve, in truth, a very select few. These are the structures, the systems, the rules you are accustomed to obeying, the customs you are familiar with by habit. All of these will be rethought and reevaluated. And if they do not serve the Oneness of the human family, they will be gone.

This is what will happen to many of the existing institutions. I am thinking of things like economic institutions, child marriage and gender- or ethnic-restricted education. I'm sure that you can come up with other examples.

The second category in this fall is the change group. Let us call this group suppliers of the essential goods and services. I would include in this spiritual education as well as more formal education, as well as the socialization education that is carried on within a family, within a community. And the suppliers of goods provide, for instance, food and clothing.

These are institutions that will and must change so that they too are focused on Oneness and preparing every individual to be able to do two things: one, walk their own individual spiritual path and two, walk that path ever conscious of the Oneness and the service of the whole. There is no such thing as an intended individual path that does not serve the Oneness and the whole of the human family. So institutions, educational institutions and supply institutions focused on these essential goods will change to this new paradigm.

And then there is the third category: new institutions, new institutional systems. Now, what would be incorporated here? Well, there are certainly many possibilities and what grows and flourishes is truly up to the human family, but I will give you some ideas.

These are new institutions for sharing. Now that word can bring to mind a great deal of fear, quite frankly. I would ask you to take a moment and simply look inward as to what you envision when I say "sharing." What do you think of sharing? How will that affect your life if sharing becomes a way of life, an institutional system that supports the human family?

Well, I hope you think of sharing creative ideas, sharing your foundational beliefs. I do not mean imposing, I mean sharing. That means giving and taking, that means speaking and listening and discussing the overlap and the differences with respect.

Sharing. I do hope that that means for some of you resources of the planet. It has been said before and I will say it again, I am not creating this thought, I am simply quoting what others have said because it is true: no one owns any part of Mother Earth. If anything, Mother Earth owns you. But that is the philosophical statement I will let you think about. Mother Earth provides life to you and there is no way of getting around the fact. You do not own Mother Earth or any part thereof. Sharing is essential when it comes to Mother Earth.

Well, if you have a sharing institutional system, it would be well if you have an institutional system that deals with relationships – building relationships and sustaining relationships in harmony. And these relationships are far more extensive than I think any member of the human family today envisions. For these are relationships moving inward to your inward-most self and the connection to your soul and higher realms.

You will need to include your relationships to the other kingdoms of this planet that are in dense physical form as well as relationships to the human families throughout the cosmos. Yes, there will be an institutional system that deals with building and sustaining relationships in harmony. So you will be in harmony with one another, with planet Earth and with the incredible variety of human families that exist on other planets.

At the moment, the concept of Oneness is alien to, I think, every member of the human family. Perhaps there are a few who begin to glimpse what it means to be irrevocably connected energetically to every other human being on this planet. And beyond that, you are connected to every other kingdom on this planet as well as being connected to Mother Earth herself. Oneness is that extensive on this planet. And this planet lives in Oneness with other planets.

But let us come back to the transition facing the human family at this point.

The human family of Earth is going through a period of construction. I think you will agree that any construction area you have experienced has two aspects. There is a clearing away, a sweeping away and then there is a construction of what is new. The optional part is how much is cleared away.

The next time you walk through a construction zone, be it a sidewalk that is being repaired, a roadway, a field that is being plowed over or realigned, a store that is being reorganized, anything of that nature, consider these three options. There is a clearing, there is a newness, something new is being introduced. And the optional portion in the middle is what of the old is being retained. That is what is happening for the family of Earth.

So please understand that a major source of chaos is the fact that the human family is going through this period of construction. And that construction will be ever so much faster and smoother and less painful if the concept of Oneness is planted and grows in the worldview of every single human being. That is what I would like to say about the fall and rebirth of a civilization.

Thank you.

Kuthumi

Ken'u ...

(from the Constellation Lyra)

This is Ken'u from Lyra and I would present a few words of Off-Earth Ally perspective on the chaos raging throughout your world today and tearing it asunder. Distress is rampant on all fronts and at all levels. Indeed, many among you fear that all is lost, that there is no voice of reason anywhere to lead you out of the madness.

As you already know if you are a long-term reader of this website, you have multiple allies that are here and ready to assist you. The Off-Earth Ally group is numerous in representation and comes with a vast array of technological and scientific boons to lay at your feet – inasmuch and as soon as conditions are ripe, meaning that mindsets are sufficiently evolved and correctly oriented to guaranty that binding ethical codes and safeguards in effect throughout the universe will be firmly in place and respected here.

Your Off-Earth Allies have also experienced, many times and in many sectors, the kind of evolutionary leap that your Mother Earth is now facing, and is in fact well into already. And so, we come as brothers and sisters, older and wiser, to help you over what must be seeming a painful and protracted threshold.

Several of your own planetary guides from the Community of Spiritual Masters, such as Lord Tabor, Ondru and Lord Maitreya, now walk openly among you once again, for the first time in millennia, though not yet under their own names. They form a catalyst for your continued viability as a planetary kingdom and as ever-evolving sons and daughters of God. They have experienced and know every tremor of the human heart, every recess of its soul. Welcome them too and allow them to guide your minds and your actions, to partner with you in steering a just course into the immediate future – literally today – over the shoals of this rocky transition.

You have a vast range of assistance in place now from your alliance with the United Angelic Kingdom and its myriad representatives, from the tiniest elementals to immense planetary and systemic devas. A specialized cadre of devas is poised to collaborate with groups of your scientists on breakthroughs that will solve many of the energetic quandaries and dangers you have wandered into, that will break the grip of the monopolies and curb the gravest consequences of the lust for profit at all cost.

There are also very high devas who guard not only planets or galaxies but eons and civilizations as well. They keep safe the eternal Godspark of the life form in and throughout the darkest times and ages. They nurture the eruption of new life and life force that stems from evolutionary tension, just as a flower will take root and push itself up through the tiniest crack in cement.

Those seeds of new life are now rooted and sprouting into a new civilization on your planet. The very depth and bleakness of the chaos in your world today is contributing to that process, even rushing or chasing it forward, strange or contradictory as that may appear to you as you witness the brutality of your newscasts from across the world or the crumbling that is happening in your own neighborhoods and institutions.

Know that we who have the privilege of long-standing experience and broader vision can see the bright future that awaits you. We have definite and practical guidance to offer, to share, once certain collective decisions are made and freely made on your part, once they are registered in your hearts and minds as the new and saner direction for the human family as a whole and for each of its children individually so that no one is left alone or forgotten, deprived or bereft.

If you have been reading these communications, you know that concerted attempts have recently been made, to no satisfactory avail, to interact with a number of your political decision-makers. Respectful ever of human free will, we have had to modify our plans to offer assistance and step back for a time until there is a change of heart, a softening of positions, a flattening of ego and the drive for power.

As humans, yours is a divine heritage but it is yours and yours alone to build as the human kingdom, in sync with all the other kingdoms of your beautiful planet that are moving forward on their evolutionary journey. You have the resourcefulness and the creativity to bring about an entirely new and golden civilization, the likes of which the world has not yet seen, the true flowering of your highest and best planetary destiny.

And as you work through its birth pangs, the chaos now engulfing your current and spent civilization, please continue to hold out your hand to us. We have heard your call. We have come in answer to it and we are here to assist and partner with you. With you, through you, we can bless and heal and teach and build and restore, which is to say that you yourselves can do all of these things.

In closing, I take a moment on the more personal front to remind you of your own guardian angels, those angelic helpers assigned to you who guard your immortal spark and sometimes even come to your physical or emotional rescue when dire straits arise. Find your own balance amid the strife and you can help steady and balance those around you, creating pools of calm and steadfast resolution to build and nurture the new time.

Your glory awaits.

Sirius Minor ...

(from Sirius)

We greet you, beloved friends. This month, we will continue the discussion, providing more information on the birth of the new civilization and naturally, on the areas that no longer serve humanity on the way there.

Every one of you will understand naturally what fields need to give way in order to create a new, peaceful and well-functioning civilization. You can start on a small scale to describe those areas and then extend to the big picture.

Selfishness, power hunger, destructiveness, anger and rage, war, corruption, exploitation of any kind of any Mother Earth kingdom – the human, animal, plant or mineral – slavery, distorted religion, betrayal, lies, all this and more will have to go out the door in order for you to create the future that all are craving deep inside.

Everyone longs to see the world change into one of peace, harmony and trust, not only between humans on Earth but also with nature. You may think this change is never going to happen. You may think that humanity is a lost case with too many power-hungry people fighting over the most stupid things, exploiting the Earth for their own benefit until the end of time. Please don't be so pessimistic. Harmony is Mother Earth's birthright. The change will happen, with or without the human species inhabiting this planet.

So what better way is there to accomplish the needed changes than to team up with the flow since deep inside, all of the kingdoms are ultimately striving for the same result, all souls are working toward the same goal. It sounds so easy. So what is holding humanity back? What is it that is creating even more chaos when all there is to go for is harmony?

It is very much like baking a cherry cake. All the ingredients are laid out on the table. The recipe for the cake is already there. There are a few rotten eggs amongst the fresh ones, a few overripe or shriveled cherries in the bowl and a few husks and tiny stones in the flour. Before one starts to bake, one needs to sift the flour to take out the unwanted elements. Same with the cherries, where the good ones are selected and the bad removed. And of course one better not fold a rotten egg into the batter! Discarding all of those elements that need to be thrown away ensures that the cake will be a success, with the batter rising to something beautiful, a harmonious, delicious, enjoyable cake. Of course, the right measure of all ingredients matters as well.

It is the same with the new civilization that is being “baked” at this point in time. The rotten eggs need to go. Anything else that can spoil the batter must be taken out. Of course many would say, “But I have always used the shriveled cherries, what a waste it would be to throw them away!” or “I am too lazy to sift the stones from the flour,” but that would only result in a not so perfect, not so harmonious cake.

There is a lot of resistance in the human family to change. You don't like change in general. But Mother Earth is preparing to bake the perfect cake, whether you like it or not. So your most important task is to open up to change and embrace it. The flow is there, and it is high time to stop resisting and jump right in, as an individual or a group or an organization.

What can an individual do to assist? First, we suggest, is to identify the elements that in your eyes no longer serve a purpose or should be deleted. Start on a small scale and work your way up.

- In your own behavior/attitude: What am I doing or not doing that prevents me, and the world, from living in harmony? What can I personally change? Do it!
- In your direct environment (your neighborhood, your congregation, your city): What is my environment doing or not doing that prevents the world from living in harmony? How can I be involved in change? Be pro-active, discuss and raise awareness. Speak up and team up with others to make a difference.
- In the bigger picture (state, continent or worldwide organizations): What else is wrong with the world? Again, team up with others, raise awareness about a cause or a field that is dear to you. The internet as a worldwide platform is bringing together campaigners from all over to join hands.

Of course, when looking at the bigger picture, it all looks so overwhelming and there is so much to do. But focus on what spurs your interest and don't despair. You are not alone in this.

Every single soul on this planet shares the same ultimate goal with you even though the person it resides in might still be involved in power games and war. Ultimately, slowly but surely, more and more people will pull on the same rope as you do. Find those people that already do for support. Team up with them. Surround yourself with like-minded people who emanate the same energy and let it spread like wildfire over your work environment, your neighborhood, your city, your country and ultimately the world.

As an individual, you will realize that a challenging situation calling for change loses its terror once you decide to go with the changes, to answer the call, to dive into the stream. The chaos will disappear and make way for a beautiful new order like a caterpillar whose tedious way suddenly turns into a butterfly. Would you prefer to stay a caterpillar? Even if you are standing on the sideline, strictly contemplating it for fear of not knowing what the metamorphosis will entail and then what being a butterfly would be like, you should not be afraid. Move forward when you hear the call.

Nothing would make us happier than to see the human family finally, one by one, responding to the call. We are here for you on this path, to assist and guide you, so don't be afraid. In times of chaos, think ahead to the ultimate goal and how wonderful it is going to be.

In harmony,

The Venetian Master ...

At this time in the world of economic planning, the core issue so far as we can see is the struggle by a few major players to maintain their position of dominance in world finance. For many years, it was European and American financial institutions who controlled global trade, to a point where it was very difficult for anyone else to challenge that dominance. The global centers for banking and financial interests were London and New York.

What we see today is essentially an old system that has been in play for well over 100 years, a system deliberately created to protect the interests of a few key nations in very clever and unique ways. This system has not evolved to reflect the times except to become more complex and more secretive than ever before.

Needless to say, this system appears unfair to those who do not have the same advantages as those within the power circle of dominant nations. Much justifiable discontent as well as additional organizations like the Group of 20 (G-20) and the Global Governance Group (3G) have developed in the past 30 years or more as many of the less powerful nations attempt to break into this elite club of banking power players. And so the situation now is that the more privileged proponents of the system are constantly analyzing how to maintain their powerful grip on global economic dominance while those who do not have the power are constantly looking for approaches to crack the impenetrable inner circle.

As things stand now, there are rules, written and unwritten, that must be obeyed by all nations participating in international global finance. No nation is allowed to speak against the current system without consequences they would be unlikely to long withstand. No nation is allowed to break any rules that are implemented by the dominant economic nations. If a nation did attempt in any way to bring down this collection of rules or to otherwise gain any advantages, the entire system would ostracize the rule breaker.

In sum, it would be suicide for any nation to challenge the current system. All international financial arrangements are made through organizations controlled by the core power nations. They in turn have an inner core of global institutions managed by clever global bankers who protect their interests. At the same time, it is only natural that other nations increasingly chafe under economic rules and regulations that primarily benefit the few who hold the power. How then is this situation going to change? How is the future of global economics and trade and the controlling of currencies going to be different?

The main point is that a fundamental change is required and that need for change will become blatantly obvious to the general public as the old system is more and more seen to be falling apart. This is clearly understood by the astute economists, bankers and banking institutions in Europe and America but they truly do not know how to deal with this situation except to make small adjustments in order to maintain their dominant economic position in the world. Eventually, this will no longer be feasible since they are running out of tricks to maintain the collapsing system and they too will no longer be able to deny or avoid the fact that a total change is needed.

When I use the word change, I am not speaking in terms of modifications to the old system. What I am speaking of is a totally new system for managing the global production and distribution of wealth. This will not please those who currently manage the world's economy to their advantage. They would rather continue under the old system because in many ways it has been extremely successful for them. But those less privileged nations who have not benefited in the same way would welcome a new system.

Why then if a more fair and just system could be developed is there so much resistance to change? The main reason is that nobody understands what could happen if the global system were indeed redesigned. This creates much fear in the hearts of those who recognize what must be done. They are concerned that new measures might result in a global economic collapse. Even small modifications to the system have been known to cause much harmful disruption. Today, the financial system is delicately balanced but it is exactly this delicate balance that places everyone in danger of economic misfortune, including the general population.

The world needs to embrace a new way of seeing what is fair and just. It needs to experience a new economic system that is fair to all. This means however that some of the power players in the US, Europe and elsewhere could have a great deal to lose. Few are willing to offer up their power so that others can participate in the world economy in a more effective manner.

There are those who have pondered for many years a realignment of the global economic system. At the same time, there are a multitude of institutions and organizations that underlie and help keep this global system functioning. It is not, as some think, that a small handful of powerful families control world finance. Rather, world finance is dominated by an economic system that allows certain nations and institutions to maintain privileges that others do not have and cannot obtain.

This is a vast topic because it involves a multitude of institutions dominated by a few powerful nations that have had the benefit of many years of privileges in the international currency markets, stock markets, international trade and many banking institutions that the general public would not even consider banks.

This leaves us to ponder how the current system could be eliminated and a new system brought into power without severe economic collapse affecting humanity world-wide. This is exactly what scares those who direct world finances the most. Corporations, international banks, national central banks and more have much to lose if something should go wrong with any attempt to change the system. This is why it may be necessary to demonstrate in a very physical manner that the old system can no longer be maintained. It is too unwieldy and the world is changing too fast for the old institutions to make the changes that would be required to keep them both viable and equitable.

Unfortunately, it is all too true. There is no choice but to put in place a new system that would effectively replace all that we know today. This broad statement will require much convincing, not only of the economic power brokers but of the general public as well. It will become obvious only when the old begins to visibly and inexorably collapse. Then will people begin to understand that global financial ties can have a devastating impact on their individual lives. What is needed is a system that is more transparent, something simpler, something clear enough that even the general public can have a sense of how it works.

For example, the currencies used today as a measure of product value are too easily manipulated behind closed doors by those who can take advantage of changes in currency valuation to accumulate personal wealth. This sort of secret scheming must stop, and stop swiftly. Your human family is at that point where you must begin to appreciate the value of products and services that affect the quality of people's lives rather than collecting currency that truly has no intrinsic value. If you doubt my assessment, look at what happens in countries plagued by uncontrolled inflation. Compare the intrinsic value of a bag full of paper bills to the value of a gallon of potable water.

The human family has reached the point now where both natural and created materials of the world must be shared in a more equitable manner. You can no longer allow the hoarding of products – especially those freely provided by Mother Nature – and the manipulation of their value based on a currency measure that benefits only the few. This must end.

What Mother Nature produces and offers the world must be seen as commodities to be shared by all. Gone will be the time when people say, "I was born in nation XYZ with a great wealth of natural resources and we will not share what we have unless we are paid the prices we decide will fit our plans and our needs." This is the case with oil today.

This planet produces enough resources so that all may have what they need to live well. Not so much that they can live in excess of what they need, and not so much that they can live in extravagance and show off their wealth, but there is enough produced for the human family as a whole to share so that nobody goes without what they truly need.

When that realization leads to the willingness to share, there will be opportunities for all to contribute to the harmony of the whole. And this realization will not become part of human culture until your educational, scientific and religious-spiritual institutions incorporate the concept of Oneness into their thinking, their teachings and their research. When that happens, the concept of serving humanity will be viewed as contributing to the well-being of the whole and that is a much more appropriate way to view this economic change.

Freewill will evolve to the point where, of free will, it is harmony with Mother Nature and with each other that is sought. When that happens, contributing to the harmony and well-being of the whole will have much influence on decisions that are made by individuals, business and financial institutions and nations. This broader change is part of humanity's rebirth and the creation of a new civilization.

Master St. Germain ...

Briefly, as concerns the fall and rebirth of your current civilization, what will fall aside are those institutions, those customs, those beliefs, those modi operandi that do not serve the spiritual advancement of the individual soul or the blossoming of Oneness in humanity collectively.

Part of the rectification required to usher in the new time involves the waning of monopolies and cartels of all kinds, including the ideological. They will simply find their powers being withdrawn, even as they squander the last of the resources they have been holding up for ransom, the human rights and welfares they have been strangling, the economic powers they now control in a death grip.

No longer can the allure and motive of pure profit rule if humankind is to survive, no matter how loud the protestations of those who think they have the final – no, the only say in their narrow, fatuous and misguided minds. There will simply be no room for them as the new time, the new tide surges in.

Not everything can or will transform at once. Too rapid progress would be too destabilizing to many of the distribution and other systems in place today. Some power bases, some customs and beliefs are deeply, deeply entrenched and will take more time to erode and be swept away. But it can and will happen as the current society becomes extinct, and it will not be for the first time. Many common customs from previous civilizations – human sacrifice, to name but one – are virtually eradicated now world-wide.

Those who are already in line with the building forces required for the new time understand the need for sharing, for collaboration, for sustainability, for the implementation of appropriate measures and practices to restore this beautiful planet to full health and abundance. Such people will actively help curb and then eradicate the toxic assaults being perpetrated on Mother Earth, her weather, her earth, her water, her air, her flora and fauna as well as her human children.

New forms of technology, machines and robotics will gradually eliminate whole classes of human servitude and other impediments to spiritual evolution, be it back-breaking labor to eke out a pittance or the mind-numbing boredom of so many current livelihoods.

The possibilities for change for the better abound on all fronts – the environmental, technological, societal and spiritual – all of them leading into the creation of the new civilization, the Golden Age in the making that is, at present for the human race, almost inconceivable in its scope and beauty. There will come a day when we of the Community walk more openly among you, along with the Off-Earth Allies and devic companions who are here, all of us ready to assist you in placing your feet upon this sacred path, rediscovering your divine nature and birthright, and creating the new heaven on Earth.

Yours very truly in this labor of love,

Master Hilarion ...

You have all heard of the rise and fall of empires, I am certain. The rise and fall of the Roman Empire, Alexander the Great's empire, the Ottoman Empire.

What we have not heard spoken of is the rise and fall of a civilization on a planet. Now, if you think that the rise and fall of one of those empires is the same as the rise and fall of a civilization, you are thinking too narrowly. This month, we are speaking of the rise and fall of the human civilization on this planet. That includes the entire human family. Every single member. No one is excepted.

What happens to one happens to all. There is no split between survivors who move forward and those who do not survive and are left behind. We need to make that absolutely clear. You see, that is what Oneness is all about: the fact that you rise or fall as one.

The fallacy of separateness is rampant amongst the human family. For one reason or another, there are those who feel safe, feel that catastrophe will not strike them or the ones they love most. Their certainty can be based on power or money – which are often the same thing – on military might, on religious conviction, on spiritual advancement, on expanded consciousness or on some other basis. Yet each one of these reasons for personal security is inaccurate. We panelists have tried to make that very, very clear.

We have tried to make clear what Oneness means. I would try again, presenting you with an image that you might find disturbing, but one that from our side is uncomfortably accurate.

Imagine that every country on Earth is in one long line. They are tied together with an indestructible rope. Each country has one country in front and one country behind. The decision makers of every nation and for every discipline (e.g., economics, medical research, astrophysics) are in the lead, all grouped together. Where they go, the countries follow.

Now imagine that five countries in the Middle East fall into a chasm. What happens? Do the countries close to the decision makers up front save the countries who have fallen? Pull them back up out of that chasm? Do the Middle East countries try to climb out by themselves? Or do they simply dangle in a void until they begin to pull those in front and those behind into the same chasm?

All countries are tied together. Either those on firmer ground help pull the dangling countries up, or those dangling in the chasm pull every other country down.

Now, supposing those countries who are dangling are fighting internally as well as fighting with each other. How easy is it to pull them up?

Remember, the decision makers for those countries are up front in the lead. They have the power to orchestrate assistance from countries and from us. But the decision makers are arguing amongst themselves.

That is how we see humanity at this time. And humanity's situation is not limited to the Middle East dangling in a chasm. Other countries are discovering that they are in quicksand, sinking fast. And still other countries are arguing with those next to them about who is standing on someone else's piece of land. And too many countries say, "All those troubles and arguments are far away. I'm more concerned about the power I have and the influence I have on my neighbors than I am worried about someone in quicksand or someone dangling in a chasm, arguing."

That is how we see humanity.

I would add that each of those countries has a population of human beings tied to it. It is through the rope that all human beings are tied to each other. And as people travel through this rope from one country to another, balance shifts between countries. So refugees from one country can pull a neighboring country into the quicksand or into the chasm.

Now, we who are panelists, who are Earth Advisors, had intended to come talk to the decision makers in front of this line. We had intended to explain to them what we know about these kinds of situations and offer them options for salvaging the entire line of countries all roped together. We know how to help, we know what must be done.

In order for the new civilization to rise, every single decision-maker's awareness must settle in on the fact that there is a rope tying all countries together, tying all peoples of all countries together. That rope cannot be cut or untied or in any way dismantled. So the first thing the decision makers and every individual in every country must accept is the fact that their personal fate and the fate of those they love depends upon the realization that the rope exists.

Every time you harm another in thought or action, you render the ground on which you stand unstable. Every time you worry about your own position, your own power, your own benefit, you are weakening the ground on which you stand. You are endangering every country and every individual on this planet.

What is the alternative? The alternative is to shift focus and explore the connections that bind you together. Cease killing the planet, cease killing one another, cease destruction.

Work in groups, groups broadcasting blessings, broadcasting light. Start where you live and send as much light and love as possible into that rope that binds you all together.

Learn what love and light flowing through you can do. Influence, as you are able, those around you and influence the decision makers, for they are up front. It is they who must shift the direction that this human family is traveling.

Bless these decision makers that they will recognize the truth of that rope, that they will listen to their own souls, base their decisions on Oneness and send the message of Oneness through the entire human family. It is then that institutions will make the necessary changes, changes that will lead to a rise in awareness, a rise in consciousness, an appreciation of the planet and of one another.

Only then will technology be of any use at all for the benefit of all. The heartfelt will to be one human family must precede the distribution of the technology that so many expect to rescue them and provide for the future of the human civilization on this planet.

Thank you.
